The Cosma Archaeological Project is located in central Peru, on the western flank of the Cordillera Negra mountains, a branch of the Andes. The project will take place over 6 weeks during the summer of 2015 (tentative dates June 14th-July 24th).

The field season will be focusing on an Early Horizon (900-1BC) temple complex, which includes a large mound with underground galleries, monumental architecture, a residential sector, and two smaller mounds.

The field school will include intensive training in archaeological field methods, artifact analysis, survey, mapping and Geographic Information Systems (GIS).
