FOOTHILL COLLEGE ANTHROPOLOGY
INVITES YOU TO EXPLORE YOUR WORLD!

HAWAII
FIELD SCHOOL 2020

JUNE 28 – JULY 18

Don’t miss this opportunity to work with Hawaiian indigenous practitioners and the National Park Service. Take part in a cross-disciplinary project looking at Hawaiian fishponds and upland land management systems through an aina-based research and education program.

We will spend three weeks on the Big Island integrating local cultural practices and service leadership with scientific research in a new and exciting way. Collaborative archaeological research and education projects are important new contributors to this growing movement towards a mutual science embracing western and indigenous values and methods.

• Cost $2900 (scholarships available)
• Up to 8 units of anthropology transferable credit
• You must attend a scheduled info session
