Welcome to Washington, D.C.!

Welcome to the 121st Joint Annual Meeting of the Archaeological Institute of America and the Society for Classical Studies. This year, we are in Washington, D.C., the nation’s capital. Our sessions will take place at the Marriott Marquis Washington, DC, in close proximity to the National Mall and other attractions.

In addition to colloquia on topics ranging from Connectivity and Colonialism, Foodways in the Roman Provinces, and Advances in Mycenaean Bioarchaeology, the academic program includes workshops and sessions on How to Start an Archaeological Project, The Future of Archaeology and Classics in American Academia, and The Future of the 1970 UNESCO Convention. I thank Ellen Perry, Chair, and the members of the Program for the Annual Meeting Committee for putting together such an excellent program. Thanks also to the staff at the Boston office for their efforts in making this meeting a success.

The Opening Night Lecture, “Conversations with a Pot Whisperer: Archaeological Ceramics and the Stories they Tell,” will be delivered by Professor Kathleen Lynch of the Department of Classics at the University of Cincinnati. Professor Lynch is well-known for her long service to the AIA, including as a current member of the Governing Board. Professor Lynch’s 2011 monograph, The Symposium in Context: Pottery from a Late Archaic House near the Athenian Agora, won the AIA’s Wiseman Book Award in 2013. She co-edited a 2014 volume on The Italic People of Ancient Apulia and has published over two dozen articles and chapters in journals and edited volumes. Through careful studies of painted Athenian pottery, Professor Lynch derives a wealth of information about various aspects of ancient Greek life such as trade and dining habits. Professor Lynch has been the recipient of a number of prestigious fellowships and awards including a Getty Residential Scholar Grant and a Loeb Foundation subvention grant. She is also an inspiring teacher, having received two teaching awards at the University of Cincinnati. Please join us for Professor Lynch’s lecture in Independence Salons D & E on Meeting Level 4 at the Marriott Marquis Washington, DC on Thursday, January 2 at 6:00 p.m., immediately followed by the Opening Night Reception.

The AIA continues to make progress in fulfilling its mission. This year, a new book award for fieldwork reports and a new grant for minority students to attend the Annual Meeting have been added to the AIA’s extensive portfolio of grants, scholarships, and fellowships. Both are named in honor of Anna Marguerite McCann, the 1998 AIA Gold Medal awardee and the first American woman to work in underwater archaeology. We are now in our 124th season of the National Lecture Program, a key part of the AIA’s mission to educate the public about the importance of archaeology. International Archaeology Day on October 19 had over 1,200 events involving more than two dozen countries. Finally, you will notice that we have just launched the newly-designed AIA website including a restructuring of our membership categories.

The Awards Ceremony will be held on Saturday, January 4 at 5:00 p.m. At this event we will honor a number of outstanding scholars including the winner of this year’s Gold Medal for Distinguished Archaeological Achievement: Professor Jack Davis of the University of Cincinnati. The Awards Ceremony will be followed by the Council Meeting at 6:30 p.m. Although the Governing Board and I manage the AIA throughout the year on your behalf, it is your organization and we are accountable to you. The Council Meeting will be open to all current AIA members, without segregated seating (although only delegates can vote). I strongly encourage all of you – including students – to attend the meeting and have a voice in the AIA’s governance.

The AIA is a complex organization with many moving parts and thousands of members representing diverse constituencies. I wish to acknowledge everyone who contributes to making this organization great through your hard work, time, and financial support. As my presidency comes to an end, I thank you for allowing me to have served you and advanced the AIA’s mission to excavate, educate, and advocate.

See you in Washington D.C.!

Jodi Magness, President
FROM THE PROGRAM COMMITTEE

Welcome to Washington, D.C.! We have a busy schedule planned for the next few days, full of papers, workshops and posters. The Program Committee would like to highlight just a few of the sessions that we’re excited to see on the schedule. First thing Thursday afternoon, don’t miss the rotating tours of the special exhibition, “Woven Interiors: Decorating Early and Medieval Egypt” and the new Cotsen Textile Traces Study Collection at the George Washington University Museum & Textile Museum. Then, here are some highlights from the session blocks that are scheduled Friday through Sunday: “Between the Mountains and the Sea: Exploring Sissi on Crete” (Session 3E) will offer a chance to find out about the exciting recent discoveries at a site that had a symbiotic relationship with the palace of Mallia in northern Crete; “Antiquities, Illicit Trafficking, and Public Advocacy: The Future of the 1970 UNESCO Convention” (Session 4H) will encourage members to continue thinking about developments in cultural heritage studies; and “Parenting and Fieldwork” (Session 5I) will highlight a topic that surely matters to many of us but that, until now has, rarely been considered in any depth. In addition, the Presidential Colloquium will present recent discoveries from the site of Huqoq in Israel’s Galilee (Session 7A) and we will all have a chance to think more deeply about our role in today’s world at “The Future of Archaeology and Classics in American Academia” (Session 2K).

As I prepare to leave my position as Chair of the Program Committee—a position that I have enjoyed greatly for the last six years—the Committee has been busy discussing philosophical and structural issues relating to the Annual Meeting. We’re particularly interested in demystifying our work for the members of the AIA. To that end, we plan to host a couple of roundtables this year. One will simply be Program Committee “office hours,” for members who would like to discuss how to put together and present proposals for workshops, colloquia, and open sessions papers. In addition, Professor Kathryn Topper (University of Washington) will host a roundtable on countering dominant macro-narratives in art history, e.g. the concept of western civilization and its impact on our discipline. If her roundtable proves to be popular, Committee members have ideas for more roundtables at future meetings.

The Program Committee has also decided to adopt and promote a theme each year. We will issue the usual general call for papers, colloquia, workshops, and roundtables: anybody with a proposal on any archaeological topic can still present it; but we will particularly encourage submissions related to the proposed theme. The theme we selected for the 2021 Annual Meeting in Chicago will be “Decolonizing Archaeology.” As always, scholars who are working on proposals on this or any other topic will be invited to contact the Chair or members of the Committee for feedback on the submission process. We are also making changes to our subcommittee names and structure, so when you submit proposals for next year, expect to see some different options.

Have a wonderful time over the next few days, and sincere thanks to you all for an enjoyable and fulfilling six years.

Kind regards,

Ellen E. Perry
Chair, Program for the Annual Meeting Committee

General Information

REGISTRATION
Registration is required for admittance to the Exhibit Hall, sessions, and special functions, as well as to use the Placement Service and to access special hotel rates for meeting attendees. Please visit the registration desks located in the Marquis Ballroom on the M2 level of the Marriott Marquis Washington, DC to pick up your materials or register on-site for the meeting.

BADGES & RIBBONS
Please wear your registration badge to all events, sessions, and meetings. You must have a badge to enter session rooms and many of the special event rooms. If you lose your badge, you may obtain a replacement at the conference registration desk. AIA ribbons may be picked up from the AIA Kiosk inside the Exhibit Hall.

GENERAL HOTEL INFORMATION
The Marriott Marquis Washington, DC (901 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, D.C. 20001) is the primary location for the 121st Annual Meeting. Registration, AIA and SCS paper sessions, Placement Services, Committee meetings, receptions, special events, and the Exhibit Hall are all located in this hotel.

EXHIBIT HALL
Exhibits are located in the Marquis Ballroom on the M2 level of the Marriott Marquis Washington, DC. Nearly 60 exhibitors, including publishers, booksellers, tour companies, and vendors of archaeological services, will be present on the tradeshow floor. A complete listing of exhibitors is included in the program. The Exhibit Hall will be open during the following hours:

- Thursday, January 2  2:00 p.m.– 6:30 p.m.
- Friday, January 3   9:30 a.m.–5:30 p.m.
- Saturday, January 4 9:30 a.m.–5:30 p.m.
- Sunday, January 5   8:00 a.m.–12:00 p.m.

AIA KIOSK IN THE EXHIBIT HALL
The AIA’s information booth is located inside the Exhibit Hall. Please visit us if you have any questions, concerns, or if you would like to learn more about membership, fellowships and grants, Archaeology magazine, the American Journal of Archaeology, Local Societies, AIA Tours, or the Lecture Program.

CONFERENCE TOTE BAG
Be sure to pick up your conference tote bag at Registration. Many thanks to our main sponsors, Atlas Preservation and College Year in Athens, and to our supporting advertisers. With their support we are able to provide the bags to all attendees.

PUBLIC LECTURE & OPENING NIGHT RECEPTION
Dr. Kathleen Lynch will present “Conversations with a Pot Whisperer: Archaeological Ceramics and the Stories they Tell,” at this year’s Public Lecture at 6:00 p.m. on Thursday, January 2, immediately followed by the Opening Night Reception. There is no cost to attend the Public Lecture; however, tickets are required for admission to the Opening Night Reception. Tickets are $35 or $27 for students with ID and include light hors d’oeuvres and one complimentary beverage. Tickets may be purchased at Registration or at the door.

JOINT AIA/SCS ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSIONS
Issues of intellectual and practical importance to archaeologists and classicists will be open for discussion. Roundtables are located in the Exhibit Hall (Marquis Ballroom) and will be held Saturday, January 4, from 12:15–1:45 p.m. Attendees are invited to bring lunch to the roundtable discussions.

COUNCIL MEETING
The AIA Council Meeting will be held on Saturday, January 4 from 6:30–8:45 p.m. in Liberty Salon M on the M4 level. Council delegates must check in before entering. All AIA members are welcome to observe Council proceedings, space permitting.

CALL FOR PAPERS
The 2021 Annual Meeting will be held in Chicago, IL from January 7–10. The academic program will begin on Thursday, January 7 and will conclude on Sunday, January 10. The full Call for Papers will be online in late January 2020.

AIA/SCS PLACEMENT SERVICE
Candidates must be registered for the Annual Meeting to use the Placement Service facilities at the Annual Meeting. Upon arrival in Washington, D.C., candidates and institutional representatives can visit the Placement Office (Dupont Circle, meeting level 3) if they need information about the locations of prearranged interviews. The Placement Service Coordinator, Erik Shell, will be on-site to assist you during the following hours.

PHOTOGRAPHY NOTICE
AIA and SCS have photographers on site to document events and the general engagement of conference participants. Any photographs, and all rights associated with them, will belong solely and exclusively to AIA/SCS, which shall have the absolute right to copyright, duplicate, reproduce, alter, display, distribute, and/or publish them in any manner, for any purpose, and in any form including, but not limited to, print, electronic, video, and/or internet.

COMPLIMENTARY WIFI
This year we are happy to provide free WiFi to all attendees. Free access is only available in meeting spaces. For information on how to log into the network, please check at Registration or the AIA Kiosk. Hotel guests also have free WiFi in the guest rooms on the regular hotel network. The Marriott requires guests to join their rewards program for free access.

SOCIAL MEDIA
Follow the Archaeological Institute of America on Facebook for the latest on the day’s presentations and special events. Join the conversation on Twitter @archaeology_aia and tell us what you’re most excited about at the conference, highlight your session, or tell people why your talk should not be missed! This year’s official Annual Meeting hashtag is #AIASCS.

SPECIAL ROOMS
Lactation Room (Anacostia, M3): This single-occupancy room will serve as a functional, private space for attendees who would prefer to feed or pump in privacy. An attendee can sign out the key from the AIA booth in the Exhibit Hall, prominently displayed behind the registration area. The room will be open during the same hours as the exhibit hall.

AIA-SCS JOINT HARASSMENT POLICY

PREAMBLE
The AIA and the SCS and their members seek to create an atmosphere at their annual conferences in which participants may learn, network, and converse with colleagues in an environment of mutual respect. The AIA and SCS do not seek to limit the areas of inquiry of their members or to curtail robust scholarly debate. Rather, the aim is to promote critical and open inquiry that is free of personal harassment, prejudice, and aggression. Everyone who attends the annual conference is entitled to an experience that is free from harassment, as well as any kind of bullying or intimidation.

DEFINITION AND EXAMPLES OF IMPERMISSIBLE CONDUCT
Harassment under this Policy refers to any behavior by an individual or group that contributes to a hostile, intimidating, and / or unwelcoming environment, such as stalking, bullying, hostility or abuse based on age, disability, ethnicity, gender expression, gender identity, institutional affiliation, marital status, national origin, race, religion, sex, sexual orientation, socio-economic status, or any other category. Such conduct is harmful, disrespectful, and unprofessional.

Harassment includes sexual harassment, such as unwelcome sexual advances, or verbal or physical contact of a sexual nature. Examples of sexual harassment include, but are not limited to:

- Any unwanted physical advances;
- Sexually suggestive gestures or noise;
- Offensive jokes, teasing, or innuendos directed at other conference participants that are offensive or objectionable to the recipient, or which cause the recipient discomfort or humiliation;
- Any unwanted sexual behavior directed towards anyone, whether verbal or physical.
- No attendee should under any circumstance engage in harassment of any kind, either in-person or online, of anyone participating in the conference in any capacity.

OBLIGATION
All participants and attendees at the conference accept the obligation to treat everyone with respect and civility and to uphold the rights of all other participants and attendees, including AIA and SCS staff, temporary staff, contractors, volunteers, and hotel staff, to be free from harassment.

Attendees should be aware that they are bound by the codes of conduct at their home institutions. This joint AIA and SCS policy, which is consistent with the professional ethics statements of both the AIA and the SCS, does not supersede institutional codes but is intended to reinforce their message.

Individuals who are currently or have been sanctioned for assault or harassment by an adjudicating institution (e.g., a university, court, or other recognized adjudicating body) will be barred from taking part in the AIA-SCS Annual Meeting and will have their registration revoked if they register. Appeals may be requested in the case of advance registration, but onsite registrations will be revoked immediately. The AIA and SCS Executive Directors must approve revocation of any registrations. Any request for an appeal against revocation of advance registration should be sent to the AIA and SCS Executive Directors no later than three weeks prior to the meeting start date. Each appeal will be reviewed by the Executive Directors and the Presidents of both AIA and SCS. The Executive Directors will communicate appeals decisions in writing.

REPORTING AT THE CONFERENCE
Conference attendees who experience or witness harassment as defined above, or who are aware that a conference participant is currently or has been sanctioned for assault or harassment by an adjudicating body, are encouraged to make contact during the conference with the Joint Annual Meeting Ombudsperson, who will hold regular office hours in a central but private location in the annual conference hotel. The location and hours of the Ombudsperson will be publicized in both annual conference programs, on the AIA and SCS websites, and in the annual conference mobile app. The Ombudsperson will also have a dedicated email address for the duration of the conference and two months after the conference. The role of the Ombudsperson is to provide support to those who witness or have experienced harassment or feel unsafe for any reason at the conference. The Ombudsperson will advise on the formal complaints process described below; however, the Ombudsperson is not authorized to give legal advice, adjudicate cases, or remove any attendees from the conference. The Ombudsperson also serves as liaison to the Joint AIA-SCS Rapid Response team onsite. If warranted, the team members may recommend that the AIA and SCS Executive Directors notify an individual or individuals that they should no longer attend sessions, events, and meetings at the annual conference currently in progress.

Quiet Room (Capitol Hill, M3): A small, quiet space away from the main portion of the meeting for those with anxiety, medical issues, or personal preferences that require a brief rest in a quiet space. This is not a conversation space or a space to host a phone call or private meeting. More detailed rules will be posted outside the door.

Thursday, January 2 12:00 p.m. – 6:00 p.m.
Friday, January 3 8:00 a.m. – 6:00 p.m.
Saturday, January 4 8:00 a.m. – 6:00 p.m.
Sunday, January 5 8:00 a.m. – 12:00 p.m.

Speaker Ready Room (Senate, M4): This room provides open outlets and tables to function as a small office for those looking to finish or briefly test their electronic presentation materials. The room will be open daily from 6 am to midnight during the conference.

Speaker Ready Room (Senate, M4):

Sunday, January 5

8:00 a.m. – 12:00 p.m.
REPORTING AFTER THE CONFERENCE

Formal complaints that require further investigation after the conference may be submitted in writing either onsite to the Joint Annual Meeting Ombudsperson, or after the conference via email to the Ombudsperson. The Ombudsperson will communicate complaints to the Joint AIA-SCS Harassment and Discrimination Committee.

Formal complaints should be specific as possible about how alleged behavior constitutes harassment as defined in the policy above. Complaints may also make reference to the AIA’s and SCS’s statements on professional ethics (https://www.archaeological.org/wp-content/uploads/2019/05/Code-of-Professional-Standards.pdf and https://classicalstudies.org/about/scs-statement-professional-ethics). Any report received will remain confidential to the maximum extent possible when the Joint AIA-SCS Harassment and Discrimination Committee considers and investigates the complaint.

The Committee may rule to dismiss a complaint if and only if the complaint falls outside the scope of the annual conference policy or if the alleged incident is already subject to criminal or other investigation, including but not limited to Title IX proceedings. A dismissal of a complaint will be communicated in writing to the complainant by the co-chairs of the Committee. If the Committee does not dismiss the complaint, it will be shared with the accused party, who may elect to file a written response, which must be submitted within thirty (30) calendar days. The Committee, after reviewing statements by the complainant and the accused, and any documents or records provided to the Committee or otherwise reasonably available to it, may, depending on its findings, recommend no further action, a possible resolution via mediation, or a sanction of an individual or individuals. The Committee would recommend for approval any sanction to the governing boards of AIA and / or SCS, depending on the membership status of the individual involved. The Committee co-chairs will communicate their findings, including any sanctions approved by the AIA or SCS governing boards, in writing to both parties.

Approved by the AIA Executive Committee, 8/27/19; Approved by the SCS Board of Directors, 8/29/19

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

OMBUD INFORMATION

Kathy Canul, AIA/SCS Joint Ombudsperson, aiascombs@archaeological.org

INFORMATION

Across the country organizations are taking steps to ensure the safety, security, and comfort of their members at their meetings. To combat unwelcome behavior at the Annual Meeting the AIA and SCS have appointed Kathy Canul, an ombudsperson meant to serve as mediator and point of first contact regarding incidents and allegations of harassment at the meeting. As a neutral observer and trained professional, Kathy will be responsible for fielding complaints from attendees in a confidential setting, listening to concerns, and identifying quick and effective solutions. For her specific duties, please refer to the Joint Harassment Policy above.

We’d like to thank Kathy for acting as our inaugural ombuds for our Annual Meeting, as well as the many individuals and groups inside and outside of the AIA/SCS membership who were critical in helping us shape a policy that we believe will lead to an atmosphere of increased safety and comfort for our attendees.

OFFICE HOURS

While the ombuds will be at several AIA/SCS events and sessions, as well as walking around the conference, she will also have set office hours for confidential meetings with attendees. This office will be set up in the Adams Morgan room on Meeting Level 3.

NOTA BENE

The ombuds position is meant to field any complaint that might apply to our Joint Harassment Policy, no matter how large or small that complaint may seem. We hope you will not hesitate to utilize her services and see her as a trusted member of the Annual Meeting who has your safety in mind.

Some complaints, however, still remain the purview of other reporting channels. Reports of unsanctioned or otherwise unethical practices in on-site job interviews should be reported to the Placement Coordinator (Erik Shell – erik.shell@nyu.edu) or the chair of Professional Matters (Barbara Gold – bgold@hamilton.edu).

If you are unsure as to where a complaint should be filed, you are welcome to ask the ombuds. She has been briefed on the workings of both the AIA and SCS, and will be able to direct you appropriately.

Woven Interiors: Furnishing Early Medieval Egypt and Cotsen Textile Traces Study Center

The George Washington University Museum and The Textile Museum

701 21st Street, NW, Washington, D.C.

Woven Interiors (closing on Jan. 5), co-organized by The Textile Museum and Dumbarton Oaks, presents 45 exceptional interior textiles from the villas, palaces, churches, mosques, and humble homes of late antique and early medieval Egypt (300–1000). Join us for curator-led tours of the exhibition and for a preview of The Cotsen Textile Traces Study Center. Tours will rotate throughout the 2 hour period, so we hope you can join us as your schedules permit. Museum/tour admission free with conference badge or proof of AIA/SCS membership.

Session 1D: Workshop

Taking to the Field: How to Start an Archaeological Project
8:00–10:30 a.m. Congress, Meeting Level 4
Sponsored by the Student Affairs Interest Group

Moderators: Rachel Dewan, University of Toronto, Amanda K. Chen, University of Maryland, and Katelin McCullough, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

For many archaeologists active in the field, establishing and directing one’s own dig is an anticipated milestone in an archaeological career. However, while many archaeologists are trained in excavation skills and fieldwork techniques, young professionals are rarely given instruction on how a project comes into being. The prospect of effectively and responsibly establishing a dig, survey, material study, or other archaeological project can be a daunting one, and is complicated by the variations in protocols, procedures, and restrictions imposed on projects in different areas of the world.

This workshop seeks to shed light on the intricacies of starting a project and to give graduate students and young professionals insight into an important, but often enigmatic, aspect of their future career. While the process of establishing a project will vary depending on the methodological approach used, the type of material involved, and the groups participating, this workshop brings together a diverse panel of archaeologists, professors, and researchers to speak on this process, offering advice and insight based on their own experiences in the field. These experiences have been wide-ranging, with the panelists having worked on or established projects that are geographically, chronologically, and methodologically diverse. From choosing where to work and contacting the correct authorities, to applying for permits and assembling a team, this session will cover the major steps involved in launching a project and carrying it through.

The workshop will consist of a panel discussion, with specific questions posed by the moderators, followed by a question and answer session.
period, in which attendees will be encouraged to pose their own questions to the panelists. An open conversation offering honest guidance and support will help young archaeologists, whether they are in the position of starting a dig now or thinking ahead, to feel confident about their futures both in and out of the field.

Session 1F: Joint AIA-SCS Workshop
Archaeology for the General Reader: A Roundtable with NEH Public Scholars
8:00–10:30 a.m. Independence Salon E, Meeting Level 4
Moderator: Christopher P. Thornton, National Endowment for the Humanities

A scan of the bestseller lists or documentary programming on television shows that there is a substantial audience for broadly accessible, well-told histories of the ancient world. Yet much archaeological scholarship fails to reach this audience. Because of habit, training, or professional expectations, many archaeologists write narrowly focused books for their fellow academics in language that lay people find inaccessible. These books may create scholarly buzz or satisfy tenure requirements, but they do not usually interest broader groups of readers. The result is a public that is often ignorant of antiquity or overly reliant on histories that are intellectually suspect. In recent years it has become clear that many archaeologists want to break this pattern by writing for general audiences. This desire is reflected in the strong response to the new Public Scholar grant program being offered by the National Endowment for the Humanities. The program, which offers fellowships to those writing well-researched books in the humanities aimed at a broad readership, has attracted over one thousand applications in its first five years. The archaeologists in this applicant pool want to be read widely and to contribute to discussions beyond their narrow academic fields. For many, that’s why they got into archaeology to start with. In this roundtable session, two archaeologists, a classicist, and a historian who have won grants in the NEH Public Scholar Program will discuss their experience writing for a general audience. The goal is to encourage other archaeologists who are interested in doing this kind of work. These speakers will share their experiences and offer advice, especially on the differences between public scholarship and academic writing. The discussion will be led by the NEH Director of Research Programs, who will ask questions including:

- Why do you want to write for general readers?
- What did you learn in the process?
- How does writing for the public change the way you conceptualize, research, and write?
- How is publishing with a trade press different than a university press?

The moderator will also allow significant time for questions from the audience. This mixture of conceptual and practical questions will help those in the audience who would like to reshape their scholarship for general readers.

Archaeology of Food and Foodways
Editors: Shanti Morell-Hart (McMaster University), Erica Rowan (Royal Holloway) and Shinya Shoda (Nara National Research Institute)

Archaeology of Food and Foodways is a new, internationally-refereed journal showcasing original scholarly work on the relationship between human sustenance and society. It foregrounds the dynamics between food and culture, food and environment, and shifts in foodways over time, covering periods from prehistory to the 19th century. We encourage the submission of work by archaeologists, historians, Classicists, and other scholars who address methodologies, theories, historical trajectories, cross-cultural comparisons, and controversies surrounding material culture and past foodways. We also encourage the submission of work by scholars and other specialists who have applied archaeological findings to such domains as public policy, culinary arts, and dietary regimes.

Session 2H: Workshop
Provenance Research in Museum Collections: Display, Education, and Publication
10:45 a.m.–12:45 p.m. Liberty Salon O, Meeting Level 4 Sponsored by the Museums and Exhibitions Committee

Moderators: Judith Barr, J. Paul Getty Museum, and Nicole Budrović, J. Paul Getty Museum

As museum-related panels at past annual meetings have illustrated, provenance research remains a vital concern and ongoing interest for many museum professionals and academics involved with collections of antiquities from across the classical world. Since the previous workshops and last year’s roundtable on provenance have addressed the methodological frameworks involved in conducting provenance research, we propose this workshop for Washington, D.C., in 2020 in order to further explore the next stages for developing this kind of research. As more institutions have begun to invest in and support opportunities for provenance research, new challenges have arisen: Once research has begun, how will this provenance information be displayed? Will it be published? How can provenance research and object histories be translated for use in diverse didactic settings and learning environments? What are the models for integrating the provenance of antiquities into publications within different media? Through a series of short case studies, participants will explore complex issues around the display and communication of provenance within collections of classical antiquities. These presentations will consider models for provenance outreach and display; how provenance and collecting histories can be taught at various levels; the publication of provenance through different avenues; and how exhibitions can prompt and promote archival reassessments of an object’s history. The presenters will draw on a wide range of institutional and academic perspectives, which we hope will lead to fruitful connections and discussion throughout the panel. The initial section of presentations will be followed by a break-out session with moderated small groups in order to allow further conversations about the particular issues and challenges in addressing provenance research. Given this, we are requesting a two-hour session. We hope that this portion of the workshop will allow colleagues from across the museum and academic communities to better understand effective and meaningful models for provenance outreach and display for antiquities collections.

Session 2K: Joint AIA-SCS Workshop

The Future of Archaeology and Classics in American Academia
10:45 a.m.–12:45 p.m., Independence Salon D, Meeting Level 4
Moderators: Mary T. Boatwright, Duke University, and Jodi Magness, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

The Humanities in general, and Archaeology and Classics in particular, are under threat in American academia, as numbers of student majors drop, departments and programs shrink, and positions are eliminated. This jointly sponsored AIA-SCS workshop aims not to complain about the situation but to discuss ways in which our professional organizations can help to remedy it, by bringing together Archaeologists and Classicists with experience as department chairs or senior administrators from different types of institutions. The goal is to come up with concrete suggestions that will enable our disciplines not only to survive but to flourish in the academic reality of today and the future. How can we attract more undergraduate majors? How can our larger numbers of simply interested enrollees “count” for our presence in the academy? How can we best train our graduate students for the changing job market? How can we stave off the shrinkage or elimination of departments and programs? We hope that the conversation between the panelists and audience in this workshop will yield productive suggestions to help us move forward.

Panelists: Kathleen Lynch, University of Cincinnati, Steven L. Tuck, Miami University, Jeff Henderson, Boston University, and Jennifer Rea, University of Florida

Session 3K: Joint AIA-SCS Workshop
Classics and Civic Activism
1:45 p.m.–4:45 p.m.
Moderators: Marina Haworth, North Hennepin Community College, T. H. M. Gellar-Grud, Wake Forest University, Yurie Hong, Gustavus Adolphus College, and Amit Shilo, University of California, Santa Barbara

Classists at all levels are well-positioned to make an impact on their communities and civic institutions. They have knowledge, experience, skills, and contacts that can usefully contribute to civic activism outside of academia proper. There are many ways to use these resources to advance social justice via public-facing scholarship, in-the-community projects, running for office, and direct advocacy. This workshop will provide attendees with the tools and strategies to engage more directly in civic activism by connecting experienced activists with SCS and AIA members interested in applying their skills to broader communities. The three featured presenters, coming from outside the discipline, will offer guidance in community organizing, engaging with representatives, and other advocacy work, with a specific eye to how Classists can combine their skills and expertise with activism. The subsequent lightning-round presentations will allow members to share their own experiences with civic engagement, presenting a broad spectrum of Classics-based activism. The small-group discussion will allow time for participants to actively engage and share techniques and resources.

There is high interest in an event where people learn how to take action and advocate. Over eighty people attended the Classics and Social Justice open meeting in San Diego in January 2019, and our membership totals over 250 people. We are responding to this interest by proposing events with broad relevance for SCS-AIA members, getting more people involved and exchanging ideas within the academic, professional framework of the SCS-AIA annual meetings. This workshop is a key step in focusing and directing the energy of SCS-AIA members towards concrete impact in their communities. By demystifying the legislative process and the mechanisms of effective civic activism, this workshop will empower members to address the structural factors that affect the accessibility of Classics, humanities, and institutions of learning more generally.

Panelist #1, a leader with the Indivisible Guide, a major grassroots advocacy organization that has inspired the formation of over 6,000 independent civic activism groups, will introduce attendees to basic advocacy and organizing strategies, and provide resources for getting involved: a kind of “Organizing 101” course. Panelist #2, a staff member of the National Humanities Alliance with a background in higher-education advocacy, will offer techniques for academics to advocate for the humanities to build a bridge between what Classicists work on and the legislators and policymakers who make decisions that impact Classicists themselves. Panelist #3, from the American Federation of Teachers, will share the experience of secondary-school teachers with civic organizing. A high percentage of our students go on to be secondary-school teachers, and secondary-school teachers are a large portion of the field (if not of the SCS membership), so it is incumbent on us to prepare the next generation. Each of these organizations has confirmed that a speaker will be on hand to address these topics. Since panel date and time cannot be known in advance of submission, however, formal abstracts written by specific presenters are not being provided.

After these presentations there will be a lightning round lasting 45 minutes, with a series of 35-minute presentations by SCS-AIA members who are or have been involved in civic activism and advocacy. This lightning round will draw speakers from the Classics and Social Justice Affiliated Group and from a broad call for contributors.

The workshop will conclude with a 40-minute session of small-group discussions facilitated by one of the presenters in the workshop an organizer, a featured presenter, or a lightning-round participant for brainstorming, skills assessments, and project planning. In the last 5 minutes, we will gather written feedback and suggestions for keeping track of projects and sustaining momentum.

Panelists: Kim McMurray, The Indivisible Guide, Alexandra Klein, National Humanities Alliance, Lindsay Theo, American Federation of Teachers, Kiran Mansukhani, The Graduate Center, CUNY, Wyn Cattabriga-Telles Douglas, Bryn Mawr College, Olga Faccani, University of California, Santa Barbara, Emily Allen-Hornblower, Rutgers University, Kristina Chew, Rutgers University, Arti Mehta, Howard University, Dan-el Padilla Peralta, Princeton University, and Jerise Fogel, Montclair State University

Session 4F: Workshop
Behind the Scenes: Choice, Pigment, and Materiality in the Ancient World
8:00–10:30 a.m. Supreme Court, Meeting Level 4

Moderators: Marie N. Pareja, University of Pennsylvania, and Hilary Becker, Binghamton University

Advancements in scientific cultural heritage allow us to see more about the material choices behind the technology and artistry of ancient objects and the pigments used to decorate them. Artists and craftspeople make decisions based on multiple factors when painting (or dyeing) an object: pigment availability and quality, technical knowledge, economic aspects, and its possible inherent symbolism. This workshop addresses issues of choice and materiality when planning and executing projects involving color. Although aspects of painting, plastering, and dyeing technologies are considered relatively standard, deviations from the expected norms and the resulting implications for both the visual and value-related effects are explored. Presentations cover a wide chronological range but repeatedly return to issues fundamental to pigment choice, a pigment’s properties, and the perceived meaning(s) of a particular color. The artists’ extensive knowledge of pigments and their properties is clear—deviations from the typical uses of pigments can reflect an even more nuanced understanding and perception of color. Three papers highlight these aspects in particular: the examination of blue and green pigments from Neolithic Çatalhöyük, an analysis of the pre-Flavian wall paintings from Nijmegen, as well as the considerations of Roman artists (e.g., chemical incompatibilities, fraud, and quality) when shopping for pigments.

This workshop also integrates discussions of three synthetic pigments created by distinct cultures: Egyptian blue, Chinese blue, and Cobalt blue. A discussion of the chemistry and production of these three blues together makes it possible to explore the technology of these man-made pigments and their properties. This exploration is continued with a paper highlighting the recent study of a late-Hellenistic to Roman pigment production center at Kos, which featured evidence for the production of Egyptian blue, among other things. The examination of blue extends to textiles as well, and the problematic nature of the use of this color in the Bronze Age Aegean—as both paint and dye—is explored. The high value of blue does not necessarily detract from the use of other pigments, as suggested in the final session presentation, which examines the techniques and perceived values unique to green in Roman art.

The perspectives of art historians, archaeologists, and conservation scientists coalesce in a workshop that encourages spirited discussion amongst panelists and audience members. These conversations will help to build a deeper understanding of the varied and nuanced realm of pigments, materiality, technology, and choice in the prehistoric and ancient world.

Session 4H: Workshop
8:00–10:30 a.m. Congress, Meeting Level 4
Sponsored by the Cultural Heritage Committee
Moderator: Elizabeth S. Greene, Brock University

The year 2020 marks the fiftieth anniversary of the 1970 UNESCO Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property. This international treaty was enacted to help curb unauthorized exploitation of archaeological sites around the world. Following fifty years of implementation, what has changed about museum acquisitions policies, legal and illicit trade in antiquities, and the protection of archaeological sites? Where has this international law succeeded and how effective are the implementation processes of different States? What additional efforts are needed for future heritage protection? What issues remain to be addressed as archaeologists continue to report discoveries of newly looted sites? Conflict-related looting has proliferated in Syria, Iraq, Afghanistan, and elsewhere; illicit trade in antiquities now draws new actors, including terrorist networks. The museum community also faces new questions about cultural objects taken under colonialist systems, where the non-retroactive nature of the Convention offers little guidance on claims of restitution.

In light of these and other current issues, this workshop brings together scholars of the 1970 UNESCO Convention and its impact on archaeological research and illicit trafficking, experts in the international art and antiquities trade, and policymakers who address legal implementation. Workshop participants will offer brief reflections on the 1970 Convention’s impact on their own areas of expertise in order to promote conversation about what constructive role the AIA, museums, and policymakers might play in the future. The goal is to consider priorities for the preservation and ethical treatment of cultural property moving forward. This workshop also recognizes the contributions of Patty Gerstenblith, recipient of the AIA’s 2020 Outstanding Public Service Award. By discussing the future of the 1970 UNESCO Convention—and the AIA’s role in public advocacy—we honor her longstanding efforts to protect archaeological heritage across the globe. Panelists: Patty Gerstenblith, Center for Art, Museum & Cultural Heritage Law, DePaul University, Neil Brodie, University of Oxford, Christina Luke, Koç University, Morag Kersel, DePaul University, Brian I. Daniels, Penn Cultural Heritage Center, University of Pennsylvania, Laetitia LaFollette, University of Massachusetts, and Richard M. Session 4J: Joint AIA-SCS Workshop
Humanities Publishing in Transition
8:00–10:30 a.m. Independence Salon C, Meeting Level 4
Sponsored by the Forum for Classics, Libraries, and Scholarly Communications
Moderator: Deborah E. B. Stewart, University of Pennsylvania

As the ecosystem for scholarly communications evolves, students and scholars in Classics, history, and archaeology must remain informed about current issues and emerging trends in disseminating and curating scholarship through print and digital publications, open repositories, archives, and libraries. Forming a discussion panel for this workshop are two faculty members who have embraced online media for scholarly communications and edit open-access publications in our disciplines, two editors from established university presses that produce digital editions on various platforms, and two subject librarians who provide author advisory services, manage collections budgets, and select materials in Classics and archaeology.

After introducing themselves and their experiences with scholarly communications, the panelists will engage in a moderated discussion about what authors—whether already published or aspiring to publish—should understand about academic publishing and media in the twenty-first century. In addition to any significant, recent newsworthy items about scholarly publishing, topics for discussion will include:

- What publishing venues should an early-career author prioritize? What resources are available to authors seeking to understand their rights and contracts with publishers?
- How can scholars share their data, methods, analysis, and/or manuscripts openly and responsibly? If deposited openly, how can they make their work more discoverable?
- How can scholars use online media to build a profile, receive feedback on works-in-progress, and share their scholarly work with a wide network?
- How do hiring, promotion, tenure, and reappointment committees evaluate scholarly communications outside of traditional journal and monograph publishing? How can scholars participating in online scholarly communications leverage their work with potential employers or publishers?
- What viable business models for open-access publications and/or innovative digital publications are publishers and associations exploring?
- How are libraries adapting budgets, services, and collections in response to the needs of faculty, staff, and students for discovering, accessing, evaluating, producing, disseminating, and preserving born-digital scholarly content?
- How can scholars work with publishers, libraries, and other entities in order to develop their aspirations for open and/or multimodal scholarship?

The second half of the workshop is reserved for open, collegial dialogue between the panel and the audience on topics or questions related to publishing, data sharing, and scholarly communications.

Parenting and Fieldwork: Challenges and New Directions
10:45 a.m.–12:45 p.m.  Liberty Salon K, Meeting Level 4
Sponsored by the Women in Archaeology Interest Group
Moderators: Maryl B. Gensheimer, University of Maryland, Maggie Popkin, Case Western Reserve University and Angela Ziskowski, Coe College

This panel addresses the challenges faced by parents with regard to entry, retention, and promotion in archaeology and related disciplines where regular fieldwork and travel is the norm. There are barriers, perceived and real, to entry into, and retention or advancement in, long term fieldwork for people who are parents or plan to become parents. While many individuals develop solutions for one-time opportunities, sustaining long term field commitments is financially, emotionally, and logistically difficult for anyone with children. In 2017 the AIA hosted a workshop on family life and fieldwork focused on creating peer networks of support. Building on that discussion, this panel aims to identify current challenges that exist on systemic rather than individual levels; to discuss the issues that create barriers to entry, retention, and promotion; and to identify potential avenues for increasing institutional support for parenting and fieldwork.

To that end, this panel gathers participants who represent a variety of perspectives. Panelists include working parents, excavation directors and senior staff members, and an officer at a major grant-giving institutions. This diversity of professional experience will facilitate the workshop’s goal to distinguish systemic challenges facing parents in archaeology and to advance concrete solutions that may involve partners inside and outside the academy.

Following a short introduction by the session organizers, each panelist will reflect on his/her own experiences and recommendations. The workshop will conclude with a discussion period facilitated by the session organizers and open to all panelists and audience members, to examine further the needs of parents who conduct or wish to conduct fieldwork and potential institutional solutions to these needs.

This workshop will raise awareness of the often-invisible challenges to entry, retention, and advancement that parents of young children face in archaeology and related disciplines. These challenges are not new, but as the demographics of AIA membership change, and as issues of gender and racial equality come to the forefront of our field, the AIA can consider systemic solutions. These might include, but are not limited to, securing a seed grant to conduct a study of how parenting affects these issues of entry, retention, and promotion; developing a set of guidelines to make digs friendlier to working parents (which may eventually be published online as an open-access resource); and raising money to endow a fund that provides support towards the cost of childcare for parents who conduct fieldwork.

Panelists: Andrew Johnston, Yale University; Amy Sawyer Koch, Towson University; Stephanie Larson, Bucknell University; Sarah Lepivski, National Endowment for the Humanities; Lisa Pierracini, University of California, Berkeley; and Angela Ziskowski, Coe College

Session 5J: Workshop

Examining Ancient Color through the Lens of Materials Analysis

10:45 a.m.–12:45 p.m.  Supreme Court, Meeting Level 4

Sponsored by the Ancient Painting Studies Interest Group

Moderator: Marie N. Pareja, University of Pennsylvania, and Hilary Becker, Binghamton University

Understanding the ways in which ancient pigments were employed relies increasingly on materials analysis. The results of these analyses reveal what was once hidden: evidence of the complex technologies and techniques used to create an artifact. A myriad of factors, from the details of the technology that was used to make the item, to the type of pigment used and the distance it likely traveled from its source, have enabled the opening of new avenues of inquiry across numerous fields of study.

This workshop focuses on materials analysis that serves as a scientific foundation from which to engage with topics such as optics, palette, procurement, composition, technology, and economy. The ways in which ancient pigments are studied is also of interest, such that papers consider the advantages of using different analytical methods and techniques on samples both in situ and once artifacts have been removed from their contexts. Scientific modes of study allow for conversations that are focused on the pigment, the object on which the pigment was used, as well as the broader implications of such use within larger contexts.

Presenters contribute from a broad range of specialties, including but not limited to conservation science, art history, archaeology, museum education, chemistry, and anthropology. Presentation topics include the study of abstract polychromatic Mycenaean painting, painted Etruscan terracotta antefixes, Masonry-Style wall plasters from Stymphalos, an Egyptian mummy-case footboard, and Fayum portraits. Throughout, presenters share a unified theme: to determine what can be understood about ancient artists’ materials and techniques. Finally, a recent exhibit at the Kelsey Museum on ancient color provides a case study for exploring the ways in which museum educators can adapt topics such as materials analysis and the ancient palette for the general public.

This array of brief presentations is chosen to facilitate and encourage discussion between panelists and audience alike in order to further our understanding of the complex history, use, and study of pigments in the ancient Mediterranean world.

Session 6I: Workshop
The Digital Futures of Ancient Objects: Discussing Next Steps for Collaborative Digital Humanities Projects
1:45 p.m.–4:45 p.m. Congress, Meeting Level 4
Moderator: Rebecca Levitan, University of California, Berkeley, and Stephanie Grimes, Ball State University

The focus of the proposed workshop is on recent work which leverages digital tools in the study of classical antiquity and the itineraries of ancient objects. As participation in the Getty Institutes and other Digital Humanities oriented working groups has only been available to a small number of digital practitioners, we aim to share a general overview of the work conducted at the meetings of the Digital Institutes, as well as contributions from scholars presenting a relevant short case study of their own work or thinking-in-progress. We are particularly interested in projects which address the ways that digital tools can help scholars better understand the provenance of ancient objects, as well as how this can be visualized and spatially oriented.

Informal discussion of works in progress and discussions of problems of methodology are welcome, with the understanding that this is meant to be a constructive forum for thinking through problems, rather than a formal academic presentation of any complete academic project. In addition to surveying the most recent advances in digital research relating to mapping, modeling, and analysis of ancient objects and spaces, we hope to discuss questions such as “what should happen when a digital project is complete?” and “how can we plan for the future stewardship of digital projects, especially those with multiple authors?” Although we might look towards examples of text-based projects as examples for best (and less-than-stellar) practice, the scope of the panel would be limited to tools developed to solve the particular problems posed by material culture of classical antiquity and charting its past and future itineraries.

The ultimate goal of the workshop is to open the work of small groups of DH practitioners to the larger archaeological community in order prevent research replication, as well as facilitate possible collaborations and a larger conversation about key issues in Digital Humanities in relation to objects from the Ancient Mediterranean. Panelists: Daniele Bennett, San Diego State University, Renee Gondek, University of Mary Washington, Ethan Gruber, American Numismatic Society, Tyler Jo Smith, University of Virginia, Jon Frey, Michigan State University, Ryan Horne, University of Pittsburgh, Rachel Stary, University of Buffalo, Jacqueline Clements, Independent Scholar, Adam Anderson, University of California, Berkeley, and Caroline T. Session 6K: Workshop
New Approaches and Technologies in Pre-Roman and Etruscan Archaeology
1:45 p.m.–4:45 p.m.  Capitol, Meeting Level 4
Sponsored by the Etruscan Interest Group

Moderator: Maurizio Forte, Duke University, and Jacqueline K. Ortoleva, University of Birmingham, UK

This workshop critically evaluates new technologies and/or methods in Pre-Roman and Etruscan archaeology. The goal is to provide a forum for exchange regarding the possibilities, and boundaries, of new approaches. While utilized in such fields as Paleolithic and New World archaeology, Pre-Roman archaeology has been slow to adopt more pioneering technologies and methods. However, the recent use of virtual reality, remote sensing, 3D repositories, geophysical methods, space syntax, geomorphology, and cognitive science to the archaeological record have generated new avenues of research. For example, the recent digital reconstruction of a late Archaic period inscribed stele from the Etruscan site of Poggio Colla has helped us better understand otherwise unclear, yet extremely crucial text. This application has the potential to shape how we read and publish lapidary inscriptions. When applied to the buried Roman town of Falerii Novi, Space Syntax has highlighted aspects of urban design not visible with more traditional interpretation methods. Recent analyses of settlement organization has allowed new data to emerge on varying geomorphological and vegetative impacts across Etruria. The application of cognitive science and neuroscience to the tomb space in Tarquinia is generating new questions regarding the experiential nature of Etruscan funerary ritual. Scale is a key consideration at sites such as Vulci 3000, where improved technologies in digital documentation are now able to precisely focus the interpretation to a range of microns. As one of the most significant sites in Etruscan archaeology, Vulci 3000 is transforming how we understand urban space in Etruria. These data jointly create new ontologies that deserve reflection, particularly regarding their capacity to enrich more traditional approaches to the Pre-Roman record.

Questions addressed during the workshop include: How can these new approaches enrich what we already know? Is there a risk of a neopositivistic trend in the use of technologies and mediated tools? Are they able to generate a different hermeneutic outcome and if so, how? How can new comprehensive “big data” for the reconstruction of the past be most appropriately handled?

The workshop has two main outcomes: Firstly, to educate participants about emerging methodologies in Pre-Roman and Etruscan archaeology to access and analyze cultural data. Secondly, to examine critically the potentiality and concerns of such approaches in building upon and further contextualizing established scholarship.

Essays in Honor of Dr. Mattiebelle Gittinger

Guest edited by Ruth Barnes and Cristin McKnight Sethi, Volume 46 celebrates scholar Mattiebelle Gittinger and her pioneering contributions to the field of South and Southeast Asian textiles. The ten essays in this issue were contributed by scholars who worked with Gittinger, as well as younger researchers who have been influenced by her scholarship.

Imagining Islands, Meditating on Mainlands
8:00 a.m.–11:00 a.m.
Supreme Court, Meeting Level 4
Sponsored by AHRC, the University of Cambridge, and the A. G. Leventis Foundation

Moderators: Anastasia Christofiopoulou, University of Cambridge, and Naolise Mac Sweeney, University of Leicester

This workshop will adopt a forum format to explore the construction of island identities in relation to mainland identities in the Iron Age Mediterranean. This topic is the focus of a major new project based at the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge, UK. The project involves the archaeological investigation of island identities on Cyprus, Crete, and Sardinia during the period ca. 1100–600 B.C.E., and will culminate in a large-scale exhibition in September 2021. The aim of this workshop session is to kick-start the project with a radical and open exchange of ideas, adopting a comparative and interdisciplinary perspective to develop new approaches to the topic. It will begin with the presentation of a case study—that of Cyprus and Cilicia. Subsequent speakers will respond to this, and workshop participants will be encouraged to use the example case as a jumping off point to explore other instances and broader implications. The workshop will be moderated by project’s P.I. and Lead Curator.

Panelists: Jo Quinn, University of Oxford, Marian Feldman, Johns Hopkins University, Evi Margaritisa, The Cyprus Institute, Jana Mokrisova, Birkbeck College, University of London, Louise Hitchcock, The University of Melbourne, and Jeffrey P. Emanuel, Harvard University

Session 8H: Workshop
Tessellated Perspectives: Moving Mosaic Studies Forward
12:00 p.m.–3:00 p.m. Congress, Meeting Level 4
Moderators: Nicole L. Berlin, Walters Art Museum, and Amy Miranda, Johns Hopkins University

Mosaic pavements were ubiquitous across the ancient Mediterranean, documented on floors and walls from the Classical period through Late Antiquity. Although mosaics provide critical evidence for reconstructing daily life in the Greco-Roman world, they are often analyzed apart from their archaeological context. This workshop builds upon the groundbreaking research of scholars like Christine Kondoleon and Rebecca Moholt, who emphasized the need to reintegrate mosaics into their original built environment. By considering floor pavements in situ (real or reconstructed) we can better understand the societies that commissioned them.

This workshop brings together, for the first time, a group of scholars—archaeologists, art historians, and conservators—with innovative approaches to mosaics. Our goal is to foster productive discussions and collaborations that move the field of mosaic studies forward, while remaining grounded in archaeological evidence and the ancient textual sources. The workshop uses “perspective,” both literal and metaphorical, as a means of investigating the creation of mosaics and the ancient viewer’s experience of them.

Purposefully diverse in terms of chronology, geography, and cultural purview, presenters address how mosaics functioned in a variety of contexts, from Classical houses in Greece to a Late Antique synagogue in the Levant. Franks and Cline discuss the role of floor pavements in the domestic sphere from two different perspectives—fourth-century B.C.E. pebble mosaics in Greek houses and tessellated mosaics from the luxury villa at Oplontis respectively. Miranda challenges existing case studies in the Roman provinces such as Anitoch-on-the-Orantes (modern-day Turkey). Friedman offers a conservator’s perspective on the challenges of in situ mosaic conservation within a larger framework of archaeological site management, with a particular focus on Tunisia.

The final papers take us into Late Antiquity. Berlin considers how the legacy of Vergil influenced mosaic production in fourth-century C.E. Romano-British villas. Britt and Boustan explore how the mosaics in the fifth-century C.E. Huqoq (Israel) synagogue forged a link between the space of communal worship in a rural Galilean village and the holy city of Jerusalem. Collectively the speakers draw attention to the yet untapped potential of mosaic studies, particularly through the workshop’s diverse methods and critical approaches to reception. Overall this workshop demonstrates the essential role of mosaics in developing the rich archaeological histories of diverse communities across the ancient Mediterranean world.

Thank you!

Thank you to our loyal donors who understand that without our extensive programming, supported by the Annual Fund and numerous endowments, the AIA would simply not be the organization it is today, nor would we be able to reach as many people as we do each year. The child who learns about archaeology for the first time, the student gaining their first field school experience, the archaeologists sharing their discoveries with captivated audiences around North America – they all thank you for your continued support.

For more information about giving to the AIA, please stop by the AIA Kiosk in the Exhibit Hall, visit www.archaeological.org/giving, or contact Bruce Keeler at (857) 305-9357 or bkeeler@archaeological.org.
